VERY A-PEEL-ING

Designer Anne Strickland selected Tequila Lime (Benjamin Moore) paint to create the stripes in this space. "By contrasting daring choices with white or neutrals in other spaces you get a visual break," Strickland says. "It's fresh and timeless."
